

AHRC Twitter Policy

Content

The Arts and Humanities Research Council (AHRC) Twitter account is managed by the press team, on behalf of colleagues across the AHRC.

If you follow us, you can expect between 1-3 tweets a day covering some or all of the following:

- Alerts about new content on our other digital channels (podcasts and videos on YouTube).
- Latest AHRC press releases.
- Calls for funding.
- Links to AHRC award holders in the news.
- Information about AHRC and award holder events.

Following

If you follow @ahrcpress we will not automatically follow you back. This is to discourage the use of direct messaging, avoid resource wasting spam handling and so that you can easily identify other key Twitter users that we think are relevant to arts and humanities research who we follow. However, being followed by AHRC does not imply endorsement of any kind.

Availability

We will update and monitor our Twitter account during office hours, Monday to Friday.

Twitter may occasionally be unavailable and we accept no responsibility for lack of service due to Twitter downtime.

@Replies and Direct Messages

We welcome feedback and ideas from all our followers, and endeavour to join the conversation where possible. However, we are not able to reply individually to all the messages we receive via Twitter.

The press team reads all @replies and Direct Messages and ensures that any emerging themes or helpful suggestions are passed to the relevant people at the AHRC.

The usual ways of contacting us for official correspondence are detailed in the contact us section of our website.

Retweets

You are free to retweet any of our tweets, however you must include our username @ahrcpress.
